Dr Nicolá Goc
University of Tasmania

Come along to this practical and fascinating session with the University of Tasmania’s Dr Nicolá Goc, researcher for the exhibition Snapshot Photography and Migrant Women: A Tasmanian Experience, on show from 18 March - 22 May 2016.

The exhibition tells the fascinating stories of migrant women from Britain and Europe who arrived in Tasmania in the post-war period. Through oral history and family snapshots the women tell the stories of their migration.

Nicolá has been recording oral histories for more than three decades and in this workshop she will explain through her own research and curatorial experience how teachers and students can successfully create and compile oral histories.

This session will be particularly useful to any teachers interested in using oral histories in their classrooms. Nicolá will provide instruction on basic oral history recording which will be suitable for primary students and she will also provide some more advanced information suitable for senior students.

Please bring along an electronic device which has recording capabilities (e.g. iPhone, iPad or smart phone).

Date: Wednesday 4 May 2016
Time: 4:00 pm – 6:00 pm
Location: Centre for Learning and Discovery
Cost: $30 per person, including refreshments and materials